"The more I get to know people, the more I love my dog." Diogenes of Sinope

"Diogenes of Sinope, 'The Cynic' and 'The Dog', was against the establishment of his time who agitated and dismembered Greek society and politics with his sharp irony and sarcastic life. He revealed to the society of his time (and perhaps to Spanish society in the 21st century?) its miseries and burst seams. He made the arrogant kneel, hung dirty sheets of corruption on the balconies and exhibited in the street market of corruption the hypocrisy that covered (or covers) the young/old utopia of democracy.

Take your seats, and above all (this is important) do not resist to the truth of the cynical Diogenes because this "dog's" irony can be a little painful.." Chico García
