Captain Nemo cares for the sea more than for his own life. Nemo lives on board the Nautilus, a secret submarine that travels across the world's oceans, far from everything and from everyone. For some time he has been observing how the coral reefs have turned into mountains of rubbish, fish into plastic bags and meadows of posidonias into sea dumps. Marine life is in danger and Nemo has decided to save it. But he cannot do this alone. For his ambitious mission he recruits Professor Aronnax, whom he will take on a submarine voyage of 20,000 leagues to show him the secrets of this fascinating world threatened by human pollution.

Nautilus is a version of the classic novel with a committed, ecological modern day vision. In short, the story that Jules Verne would tell nowadays.
